Description

The Bosch Rexroth 050560-407401 is a digital output module designed for industrial automation systems. Operating at 24 VDC, it features seven-position terminal blocks and LED indicators for clear status monitoring. This module is part of the Bosch CL 500 product family, known for its reliability and performance in automation applications. It is suitable for controlling various industrial processes, providing precise and efficient output control. The module's robust design ensures durability in demanding environments, making it a valuable component for enhancing automation system capabilities.
